

Inaugural Conference Summing up report

The conference ended at 5.30 pm on 2 September following a half-hour discussion of the main lessons and possible future agenda of the Cultural Political Economy Research Network. Apart from general expressions of satisfaction with the organization and content of the two days' intensive work, the following main points emerged in the 'summing up' session:

1. Professors Susan Robertson and Roger Dale from the Graduate School of Education have agreed to host the second conference in University of Bristol (possibly in July 2016).
2. We shall be in touch at a later date concerning a Handbook on Cultural Political Economy.
3. The conference website will continue to be a post-conference venue for further networking among participants or those who want to join us. If you know anybody who wants to join the list, please don't hesitate to let Ngai-Ling know.
4. We discussed how best to enhance the prospects of early career scholars in this emerging field and welcome further suggestions on this.
